PREFACE

This summary and chronology updates United States-China Military Relations, 1979-1985: Analysis and Chronology (ICOD: 30 September 1985) and consists of exchanges of military and military-related delegations that occurred between China and the United States in 1985. The dates, leader, and itinerary of the delegations accompany a brief analysis of each visit. The data, current as of 2 January 1986, were obtained primarily from Chinese media reports.

Military visits are defined as exchanges between officials of the US Department of Defense and the Chinese Ministry of National Defense, and between members of the two countries' armed forces. Military-related visits are defined as exchanges between high-ranking US and Chinese Government leaders including officials of ministerial or cabinet rank whose visits may have had military or strategic significance.

SUMMARY

Since 1980, the United States has been willing to assist China in enhancing its military capabilities in selected areas on a case-by-case basis, and China, especially in the last 2 years has expanded its military contacts with the United States as a means of modernizing its defense. While stressing that it will rely on its own resources, China considers the United States an important source for its military modernization. In 1985, the United States and China exchanged 23 military and military-related delegations, the most in any single year since normalization. Of the 23 exchanges, 11 were military and 12 were military-related (see table). These exchanges show the convergence of China's interest in military modernization and US willingness to aid that effort.

The 11 military exchanges of 1985 were either dialogs between the highest-ranking uniformed members of the two countries' armed forces or military modernization-oriented tours. The former exchanges included visits to China by the Chairman of the US Joint Chiefs of Staff and the Chief of Staff of the US Air Force, and a visit to the United States by the Commander of the Chinese Navy. Most of the military modernization-oriented exchanges took place in the areas of professional military education, military training, logistics, and defense mapping. The remaining military modernization-oriented exchanges were geared toward weapons technology acquisition. Throughout the year, delegations conducted negotiations for the sale of US weapons and military technology for China's ground, naval, and air forces. In 1985, China purchased five marine gas turbine engines for two yet-to-be-built LUDA Class destroyers, and through the Foreign Military Sales Program, the United States offered to sell China plans and equipment for a munitions factory to produce 155-mm artillery ammunition. Negotiations continued for the sale of other defensive naval equipment and possible US assistance for modernizing China's fighter aircraft.

While China sought to acquire US assistance for its military modernization in 1985, it could not come to terms with the United States over a ceremonial port call by US Navy ships. Plans for the ship visit, originally scheduled for May, became unsettled in April when China said it had received assurances that US Navy ships visiting China would not be nuclear armed. The United States denied that it gave such assurances--reiterating the US policy of neither confirming nor denying whether US ships carry nuclear weapons. A month of subsequent negotiations failed to resolve the issue, and the visit was postponed. The cancellation of this visit was also due to China's concern for appearing to be militarily aligned with the United States in view of its professed "independent foreign policy," and for its image as a leader in the Third World and the Non-Aligned Movement.

The most significant high-level military-related exchanges in 1985 were Chinese President Li Xiannian's July visit to the United States, the fourth meeting between President Reagan and Premier Zhao Ziyang during the 40th anniversary session of the United Nations General Assembly in October, a meeting between US

Secretary of State George Shultz and Chinese Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian, also at the United Nations, and Vice President George Bush's second trip to China in October.

01/12/85	US	T Gen. John W. Vessey Chmn, Joint Chiefs of Staff	Beijing, Shenyang, Hangzhou, Shanghai, Guangzhou	Vessey is the highest ranking uniformed member of the US Armed Forces to visit China since the establishment of diplomatic relations. Vessey holds 3 days of talks with his counterpart, CPLA Chief of the General Staff Yang Dezhi. The two officers focus discussions on furthering friendly contacts between the two countries' armed forces. The US Embassy in Beijing says the visit is a "soldier-to-soldier" visit and does not include discussions of arms sales or military technology transfers. Vessey tells Yang that US-China military exchanges are "designed to promote peace and understanding, and threaten no third party." Vessey also says that military exchanges must be integrated with military technology cooperation. Yang, who accepts an invitation to visit the United States at a date yet to be determined, tells Vessey that some "difficulties and obstacles" stand in the way of the development of Sino-US relations and that these problems "should be treated seriously." Premier Zhao Ziyang tells Vessey he hopes the US Government will take "practical measures" to improve US-China relations in Pres Reagan's second term. Min of Natl Defense Zhang Aiping holds a "friendly talk" with Vessey. After his meetings in Beijing and a tour of the CPLA Military Academy, Vessey and his delegation tour Shenyang, Hangzhou, Shanghai, and Guangzhou where they view Chinese ground, naval, and air force units. 01/27/85	US	T Melvyn Paisley Asst Sec of the Navy for Research, Engineering, and Systems	Beijing	Paisley arrives in Beijing for 12 days of talks with CPLA officials to continue negotiations on the possible sale of defensive naval weapons and marine gas turbine engines to China. Paisley and his delegation meet with Min of Natl Defense Zhang Aiping. [In Aug 85, China purchased five General Electric Co. LM2500 marine gas turbine engines.]	Ta Kung Pao (Hong Kong), 31 Jan 85, p.4; FEER, 7 Feb 85, p.8; Peking Informers (Hong Kong), 16 Feb 85, p.7.
02/24/85	US	T Paul Wolfowitz Asst Sec of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs	Beijing	Wolfowitz, in China for a "working visit," has a "friendly talk" with Chinese Foreign Minister Mu Xueqian and exchanges "views on international and bilateral issues of common concern" with Vice Foreign Minister Zhu Qizhen. According to the Associated Press, the talks center around hostilities in Kampuchea and along the Sino-Vietnamese border; Wolfowitz asks China to increase its aid to Kampuchean resistance fighters. 03/17/85	US	T	Michael Armacost Under Sec of State for Political Affairs	Beijing	Armacost holds 3 days of talks which the Chinese describe as "friendly, earnest and helpful to the enhancement of mutual understanding." Armacost meets separately with Vice Premier Yao Yilin, Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian, and Vice Foreign Minister Zhu Qizhen. In addition to exchanging views on bilateral relations, the two sides, according to the Chinese Foreign Ministry, discuss South Asia, the Middle East, Southeast Asia and Central America, as well as the present state of US-Soviet and Sino-Soviet relations. Armacost says that during his talks, there was "a considerable focus on East-West issues and our respective ties with the Soviet Union in light of recent developments there" and that the United States "does not fear an improvement in Sino-Soviet relations." Armacost's visit comes days after the funeral of Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko and the assumption of power of Mikhail Gorbachev. 04/12/85	US	T	Arthur Hummel Ambassador to China	Beijing	Hummel and Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Zhu Qizhen engage in negotiations to decide whether US Navy ships will pay a ceremonial port call at Shanghai as scheduled. Talks have been ongoing since CCP General Secretary Hu Yaobang said on 10 Apr that the United States agreed not to include nuclear armed ships in the port call. Prior to Hu's remarks negotiations had been conducted by the two countries' defense establishments. US policy is not to disclose whether any US Navy vessel carries nuclear weapons. The State Dept denies the United States has given such an assurance to China. [On 13 May the State Dept announced a postponement in the proposed port call by US Navy ships to Shanghai.] Ship visits to China remain under consideration, and both sides continue to discuss the issue through diplomatic channels. 04/23/85	US	T	MG Perry M. Smith Cmdt, National War College	Beijing	MG Smith leads a 30-member delegation from the National Defense University (NDU) on a tour of the CPLA Military Academy. The delegation consists of faculty and students from NDU's National War College and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces. The delegation is received by Dep Cmdt Zhang Lin and is briefed on the Academy's organization and curriculum. This is the third exchange between NDU and the CPLA Military Academy. In Apr 79 then-NDU Pres LTC Robert Gard led a delegation to China. CPLA Military Academy Cmdt and Vice Min of Natl Defense Xiao Ke led a delegation to the US in Oct 80. 06/19/85	US	T	Robert Linhard Acting Sr Dir, Defense Programs & Arms Control, Ofc of the Special Asst to the Pres for National Security Affairs	Beijing	Linhard leads a 6-member delegation from the Office of the Special Asst to the Pres for Natl Security Affairs for 3 days of briefings on the proposed Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), or "Star Wars" space weapons research. China has criticized the SDI proposal as a new field for superpower military confrontation, an escalation of the arms race, and an obstacle to arms negotiations.	CSM, 18 Jun 85, p.2.
06/25/85	US	T	Richard T. Kennedy Amb-at-Large, Special Advisor to the Secretary of State for Nonproliferation and Nuclear Energy Affairs	Beijing	Amb Kennedy holds 4 days of talks with Vice Premier Li Peng and responsible officials of the SSTC aimed at resolving differences over the dormant bilateral agreement on cooperation in peaceful uses of nuclear energy. [The agreement, initialed during Pres Reagan's Apr 84 visit to China, had not been sent to the US Congress for final approval after more than 1 year, because it lacks a written pledge on nonproliferation. The United States is concerned that China might be assisting Pakistan's nuclear weapons program.] Xinhua reports Kennedy and SSTC officials had a "useful exchange of views" on bilateral nuclear energy cooperation. At the conclusion of his talks in Beijing, Kennedy says "substantial progress" has been made toward ending the deadlock over the nuclear pact. An unidentified US official reportedly says that full agreement with China on a nonproliferation guarantee could be reached by Chinese Pres Li Xiannian's Jul 85 visit to the United States. During talks with Reagan, Li notes that Taiwan remains the "main snag" to improved bilateral relations. Li's meetings with Secretary of State George Shultz on international issues are described as "friendly and candid." He also meets with former Secretaries of State Henry Kissinger and Alexander Haig. Li meets with Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. John Vessey for "friendly and frank exchanges of views" which are further described as "significant." Their discussions include the issue of US arms sales to China. The 12-day session focuses on combined arms training with individual, unit level, and specialized combined arms training of infantry, artillery, armor, and air force elements through briefings and observing exercises. The CPLA delegation observes ranger unit exercises at the US Army Infantry School, and airborne exercises performed by the 18th Airborne Corps at Ft. Bragg, and inspects the facilities and observes exercises at the US Army National Training Center at Ft. Irwin. The bilateral seminar is a result of discussions held during the 1984 exchange of military training delegations. The second seminar will be held in China in 1986.
